

Lockie Cooke - Founder of the Indigenous Communities Education and Awareness Foundation (ICEA).

Lockie Established the organisation after an eye opening experience in a remote Kimberley community in 2006. Lockie's commitment has developed a NFP with a clear Purpose of, Reconciliation inspired by young people.

The Foundation has developed into becoming a sustainable organisation one that continually engages young people to be the change makers in their community and maintains active involvement today as a board member.

Lockie is a past board member at the School for Social Entrepreneurs Australia and currently on Board member of Broome Futures limited.

Lockie in 2011 and 2013 was the Australian youth representative at CHOGM for the Commonwealth Youth Forum, current Western Australian mentoring Ambassador, Australian head delegate for the G20 youth summit the Y20 in 2014, and Australian youth awards cultural understanding winner 2013 and Young Western Australian of the year finalist in 2014. Lockie's most recent accomplishment is EY Entrepreneur of the Year for the Western region with the national awards in October.
